The folding carton created the packaging industry as it is known today, beginning in the late 19th century. The process involves folding carton made of paperboard that is printed, laminated, cut, then folded and glued. The cartons are shipped flat to a packager, which has its own machinery to fold the carton into its final shape as a container for a product. An example of such a carton is a cereal box.

Customer Experience

Creating value through transforming customer journeys

Almost every successful company recognizes that it is in the business of customer experience. Many businesses understand that it's no longer enough to compete on products and services; how a company delivers for its customers is beginning to be as important as what it delivers. Customers—whether they're airline passengers, online retail consumers, or IT-services outsourcers—not only increasingly dictate the rules but also expect high levels of satisfaction from the savviest practitioners and the sleepiest industry participants alike. Companies that work to master this dynamic become superior competitors.

At encode, we put in service over profit and that's way believe in mantra of a creative yet reliable and consistent source of print house.
